Prostatic hyperplasia in acromegaly, a myth or reality: a case–control study

Santosh Kumar¹, Ram Niwas Yadav², Prakamya Gupta³, Balan Louis Gaspar⁴, Nandita Kakkar⁴, Alka Verma⁴, Girish Parthan⁵, Anil Bhansali⁵, K K Mukherjee³, Márta Korbonits⁶ and Pinaki Dutta⁵

Departments of ¹Urology, ²General Surgery, ³Neurosurgery, ⁴Histopathology and ⁵Endocrinology, Postgraduate Institute of Medical Education and Research, 4th Floor, F Block, Nehru Hospital, Chandigarh 160012, India and ⁶Barts and the London School of Medicine, William Harvey Research Institute, Queen Mary University, London EC1M6BQ, UK

Correspondence should be addressed to P Dutta
Email
pinaki_dutta@hotmail.com

The authors of this article apologise for a mistake in the author list of this article published in the European Journal of Endocrinology vol 172 pp 97–106. Dr Anupam Lal, who performed all the transrectal ultrasonographies and measurements reported in this study and who was also a co-guide for Dr Yadav had not been included in the author list. The correct author list and their affiliations is published in full below

Santosh Kumar¹, Ram Niwas Yadav², Anupam Lal³, Prakamya Gupta⁴, Balan Louis Gaspar⁵, Nandita Kakkar⁵, Alka Verma⁵, Girish Parthan⁶, Anil Bhansali⁶, K K Mukherjee⁴, Márta Korbonits⁷ and Pinaki Dutta⁶

Departments of ¹Urology, ²General Surgery, ³Radiodiagnosis, ⁴Neurosurgery, ⁵Histopathology and ⁶Endocrinology, Postgraduate Institute of Medical Education and Research, 4th Floor, F Block, Nehru Hospital, Chandigarh 160012, India and ⁷Barts and the London School of Medicine, William Harvey Research Institute, Queen Mary University, London EC1M6BQ, UK